

The Ricoh hybrid and remote work assessment.

The unexpected is the norm.

The exception is the rule.

When work happens, you find a way to get through it.

But you know you and your team deserve a better way.

If any of these challenges sound familiar, we get it. And we can help solve it.

| Are you balancing security with seamless access?                                      | This happens | Never happens |
|---|--------------|---------------|
| We need access to sensitive files when working remotely or on mobile.                 |              |               |
| Employees are on their own to manage personal devices, even if it risks company data. |              |               |
| It's important, but we struggle to engage employees in cybersecurity training.        |              |               |
| Employees have multiple passwords for multiple platforms.                             |              |               |
| With our current workflow and tech, email attacks pose a larger threat.               |              |               |

| Do your employees work like teammates or strangers?                                     | This happens | Never happens |
|---|--------------|---------------|
| Employees need to work closely with people they have never met in person.               |              |               |
| Some work groups are in Basecamp, others in Slack and still others just text message.   |              |               |
| We've missed important information scattered across text, email, in-document messages.  |              |               |
| Remote work can make our people feel like they're grinding away in solitude.            |              |               |
| Teamwork is hampered when remote and hybrid staff don't have equal access to documents. |              |               |

| Ever feel like employees are working at half capacity?                                   | This happens | Never happens |
|--|--------------|---------------|
| Important meeting notes, recordings and inputs are scattered across different platforms. |              |               |
| Software updates are managed individually.   |              |               |
| Version control slows us down, and multiple "final" files cause confusion.               |              |               |
| Scheduling remote meetings feels like we're in the time zone twilight zone.              |              |               |
| Large files and server sync issues interrupt email delivery.                             |              |               |
